Reds Score Third Straight Victory Over the Giants, 7-3--Robins Have Romp With Cubs, 16-1

Daubert's Long Homer Proves Decisive Blow for Visitors

Veteran First Baseman Hits Into Right Field Bleachers With Two Aboard; Scott Pitches Well for Six Innings, but Is Batted Out in the Seventh

By W. B. Hanna

There was no change for the better yesterday in the condition of the Giants. Vitality low; resistance subnormal. The Reds went around the dispirited champions like a cooper going around a barrel, an ancient simile, but appropriate to a description of the way the frisky Reds went around the passive Giants. The score was 7 to 3. The defeat hurt doubly, as the Cardinals were winning in Boston.

And Now the Robins

The Reds took all three games. They outplayed the champions as decisively as the Pirates did, though not as often. It rained one day, and now we know why the postponed game was pigeonholed till a later series. That was strategy, showing that the Giants haven't lost all of that commodity.

haven't lost all of that commodity.

Jack Scott couldn't hold the ravaging Reds all the game. The lean castoff did well until the seventh inning.

He put a lot of effort into his work, went about it with more zeal than his fellows did and dearly would have loved to beat the team that cast him off, but a home run by Daubert in the seventh inning, with two on bases, was the conquering hit. It gave the Reds a wide lead and broke the Giants, who, for the time being, invite breaking by their frangible state.

First Banishment for Frisch

First Banishment for Frisch
The Giants have been putting more zeal into their kicking than into their playing. You can kick at the umpire when you can't connect with the ball, but it won't take you as far. Frank Frisch kicked, and for once in his clean and praiseworthy career was put out of the game by an umpire.

Rigler maintained that in pivoting for a double play Frisch didn't have his foot on the base. Whatever the merits of that decision or justification for the kick, a wail by Cunningham in the ninth inning at being called out was ridiculous. The ball beat him by a step.

a step.

The Giants aren't making their hits count. They are hitting with one or two out and failing with men on bases

two out and failing with men on bases That's their weakness as much as any pitching frailties. Behind no better pitching they've played better than they're playing now. They're a game team, pure grit, and they'll come out of it, but don't blame it all on the pitching or the umpiring.

The Reds, in contrast, made timely hits, and long, hard ones. Hargrave, ready and rugged, lined a home run into the lower grandstand in the sixth inning, and the mammoth slam which Daubert used to break up the game in the seventh enrolls that Red among the select few—Ruth, Robertson, Kelly and Daubert—who have reached the right field bleachers with home runs.

Yesterday's was the first full game Roush has played this year. He went for Harper, who reported lame George Burns was shifted to right field. With Harper or Roush the Reds still have the best outfield in baseball, defensively at least.

Sam Jones, who could win twenty-three games with the skidding Red Sox last season, can't win half that number with the Yankees, one of the best run-making teams in baseball. It is spicy incidents of this sort that make club owners and managers look around for tall cliffs to dive from, with a deep lake waiting at the end of the journey.

"What is true courage?" asks an exchange. We know of no finer example than for a St. Louis owner to sell Sisler or Hornsby and then try to keep his ball park open.

Verdict Is Reached in 4th Inning Which Yields 10 Runs

With Victory Assured, Vance Retires to Rest Un for Giant Series; Chicago's Lone Run Is Score Off Recruit Pitcher With Two Out in the Ninth

By Joseph Val

The Robins waded through an interesting, though rather brutal scrimmage, with the Cubs at Ebbets Field yesterday and Robbie declared a appropriate training for the three-game series with the Giants, which will be inaugurated to-day. All the Brooklyn players were amazngly desirous of murdering the ball, and they achieved their goal to such an extent that they tallied sixteen times in a scoring merry-go-round, while the Colcould score but once.

It was a gala day for virtually all? the Robins, and especially for Dazzy five with the Reds and one out of three Vance, who shut out the Cubs for five innings and then retired to rest up for the Giant series. Mamaux also held the Cubs scoreless for two innings, and then Jim Murray, formerly of Syracuse University, pitched the last two frames. Murray was rather wild and it was off his delivery that the Cubs scored their Knufmsnn, Stueland and Jones were the poor innocents led to the slaughter; and each in the state of the staughter. cents led to the slaughter, and each in turn suffered a terrific bombardment. Kauffman hung on bravely for three innings, but evaporated under the shellfire in the fourth. Stueland took up the lost cause, but he only floundered helplessly while the Brooklyn storm waxed furious. When Stueland finally dug himself out Brooklyn had a total of ten runs for the fourth inning.

Vance Takes a Rest

As Bert Griffith had hit a home run into the left field stands in the first inning the big fourth inning smash made it 11-0. Vance could well afford made it II-0. Vance could well afford to take it easy, but he again whitewashed the Cubs in the fifth and then fetired. Mamaux pitched his head off to keep the Cubs from scoring and it looked like a shut-out until Statz knocked in a run off Murray with two out in the ninth.

The Robins mean while kept the scoring wheel turning incessantly. They obtained five more runs off Percy Jones and then called it a good day's practice in preparation for the Giants.

and then called it a good day's praction for the Giants.

There was nothing extraordinary in Brooklyn's scoring. The Robins just developed a mania to hit the ball and run wildly, almost fool'shly, around the bases. They drew futile throws from the Cub fielders and made the most of all their scoring opportunities. Eight all told were gathered in that fourth inning, with Olson and Vance getting two apiece.
